Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Promptly at noon General McCook, secretary of the senate, called the body to order, and prayer was offered by the chaplain, Rev. Duntly, after which Senator Edmunds offered a resolution declaring Senator John Sherman the president pro tem of the senate. Senator Voorhees moved the amendment to strike out the name of John Sherman, and insert instead the name of Isham Harris, which amendment was voted down by a party vote, yeas, 29 nays 35. Senator Sherman, without a division, was declared duly elected president pro tem, Sherman and Harris both abstained from voting.

Upon the request of Secretary McCook, Senator Sherman was escorted to the chair by Senators Edmunds and Voorhees, and the oath of office was administered to him by Senator Edmunds.

Sherman said: Senators I return my grateful thanks for the high honor conferred upon me. In common with all the people of the United States we feel profound sorrow for the sudden death of the vice-president, who by the constitution is also declared president of the senate. The contingency has now arrived when it becomes the imperative duty of the senate to elect a president pro tem here. In accepting the position assigned me, I feel that there are many senators on the other side of the house more able to discharge the duties of this position, more experienced in the rules and orders of the senate than myself, still I accept with the desire that I may be able to enforce the rules with kindness and impartiality so as to ascertain if possible the sense of the majority of the senate and give the minority its full constitutional rights and protections. With the sincere desire of performing this duty I appeal to each individual senator for his courtesy and forbearance.

Senator Cullom presented the credentials of Senator Logan's election from Illinois, and Senator Pike presented those of Senator Blair, of New Hampshire. The credentials were read. The latter senator was sworn in by the president pro tem.

Twelve o'clock noon was fixed as the hour of daily meeting, unless otherwise ordered. The secretary was instructed to inform the president of the United States and the house of representatives that the senate had chosen John Sherman as president pro tem here.

Sensors Edmunds and Harris were appointed a committee to join such a committee as may be appointed by the house of representatives to wait upon the president, inform him that a quorum of each house had assembled, and that congress was ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

While waiting for information of the action of the house of representatives the senate took recess.

At 2:40 p. m. the newly chosen president pro tem called the senate to order.

The clerk of the house of representatives brought a message from that body announcing the election of the speaker and clerk, and the appointment of a committee to wait on the president in conjunction with the committee already appointed by the senate.

Senator Voorhees then offered the following resolutions, prefacing with the remark that in doing so he was to perform the saddest duty of his public life:

Resolved, That the senate receive with profound sorrow the intelligence of the death of Thomas A. Hendricks, late vice-president of the United States, and for a number of years a distinguished member of this body.

Resolved, That the business of the senate be suspended in order that the eminent public services and representative of the deceased may be appropriately commenced.

Resolved, That the secretary of the senate be directed to communicate these resolutions to the house of representatives.

Senator Voorhees asked that the resolutions be permitted to be tabled, subject to be called upon at a future day, of which the senate should have due and timely notice.

The resolutions were accordingly laid on the table.

Senator Harrison moved immediate adjournment of the senate out of respect to the late vice-president. The motion was agreed to and the senate at 2:43 adjourned till to-morrow.

House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The chamber presented a pleasant scene, a bright red carpet lending an air of cheerfulness and warmth to the hall which had been thoroughly renovated since last spring, while a number of desks, including that of the speaker, were decorated with flowers. Here and there groups of members stood chatting and laughing, political animosities being set aside for the time being, while new members took advantage of the occasion to extend their acquaintance among their older and more experienced colleagues. Apart from the exchange of cordial greetings the chief topics of conversation was the proposed change in the rules. The gallery, which was partially filled, a majority of the spectators were ladies. At precisely noon the house was called to order by J. B. Clark, its clerk, and the first session of the fiftieth congress began. When order was secured the clerk proceeded to call the roll of members elect. While roll call was in progress a page walked down the centre aisle bearing in his arms a huge floral design representing a section of a canal navigated by a canal boat laden with diminutive bags of grain, the whole being inscribed: "Hennipen." As he placed it on the desk of Mr. Murphy, of Iowa, the especial champion of the Hennipen canal project, the house broke out in applause and laughter.

The call disclosed the presence of 320 members, the only absentees being Miller, of New York; Henderson, of North Carolina; Aiken, of South Carolina; Craig, of Texas, and Croxton, of Virginia.

Nominations for speaker were then in order, and Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, being recognized, presented the name of John Griffin Carlisle, of Kentucky. Messrs. Hancock, of New York, and Cannon, of Illinois, then rose but the latter was recognized and placed the name of Thomas Reed, of Maine, in nomination.

Messrs. Morrison, of Illinois; Tucker, of Virginia; Hancock, of New York, and Brown, of Indiana, were appointed tellers to count the vote, which was immediately proceeded with.

The result was announced as follows: For Carlisle, 177; Reed, 133; and amid loud applause, the clerk declared Mr. Carlisle elected and appointed Messrs. Tucker and Reed a committee to conduct the speaker to the chair.
